Roberto Scarcella Perino, an Italian composer living in New York, and Federica Anichini, a scholar in Medieval Studies, have created a charming piece of children's choral music. Following their Le Passioni dell'Aria (2014) Roberto and Federica have composed Le Passioni dell'Anima.

The piece is a musical story, and can be performed as a very short opera. The emotions at the core of the piece are six, paired in opposites: Tristezza/Gioia, Paura/Coraggio, Rabbia/Gentilezza (Sadness/Joy, Fear/Courage, Rage/Kindness).

They are represented as the guests—the soul, as their ever available hostess who, striking up conversation with each of them, reveals their portrait. Anima, the soul, is interpreted by a soprano who sings 4 arias during the Azione in musica.

The different passions of the souls were the inspiration for Roberto's music. Federica's lyrics are meant to depict the emotions, simply as temporary guests taking turns in the children's mind and body. Last but not least, Le Passioni dell'Anima speaks to the engagement of children in a foreign language, and in Italian in particular.

The Italian lyrics give them the chance to be exposed to the sounds of a language deeply connected to the very origins of music composition.

Singing Le Passioni dell'Aria in Italian has proven to be a thrilling experience for the kids of the New York City Children's Chorus. Now, we have asked the same choir to premiere our Le Passioni dell'Anima.

The performance is scheduled for the Spring 2017, at the Casa Italiana Zerilli-Marimò [3], in New York City. Le Passioni dell'Anima will be performed in Italy as well.

On April 2nd, 2017, in Messina, Sicily, the Coro di Voci Bianche del Conservatorio Vincenzo Bellini di Palermo will be conducted by Maestro Antonio Sottile for the Filarmonica Laudamo [4].
