

New York Reads New [Graphic] Literature from Europe

Marina Melchionda (November 12, 2008)

This year the New Literature from Europe series will celebrate the graphic novel. Seven of the most famous European representatives of this literary genre will meet their public in New York. They come from the Czech Republic, France, Germany, Italy and Spain.

The 5th edition of the New Literature from Europe series will take place in New York from November 17 to November 21.

The event is sponsored by the cultural institutions of the Czech Republic (Czech Center New York [2]), France (The Cultural Services of the French Embassy [3]), Germany (Goethe-Institut New York [4]), Italy (Istituto Italiano di Cultura [5]) and Spain (Istituto Cervantes [6]).

This year the event will celebrate the graphic novel, well appreciated in both Europe and the United States. It is indeed considered a form of literature that embraces many styles and approaches. Fellows of all ages are invited to participate to the event. Nowadays, in fact, critics consider the graphic novel to be attractive also for the adult public, since the range of issues it covers is wide and multifaceted, going from heroes' stories to themes such as the Holocaust (Maus [7]) and the Islamic Revolution in Iran.

Once, instead, comics and vignettes were exclusively conceived for the youth, filling the shelves of the children sections of the main libraries.

Seven artists coming from all over Europe will present to the American public their latest and more significant works.

Jaromir Svejdik [8] (aka Jaromir 99) and Jaroslav Rudis [9] will represent the Czech Republic. They worked together on the publication of Alois Nebel [10] - the most popular graphic novel of the country -, the former as the writer and the latter as the cartoonist.

David B. [11] and Nicolas de Crécy [12] come from France. They both recount fantasy stories but with different styles: De Crécy' latest novel, Nocturnal Conspirancies, consists in a series of monochromatic drawings that better transmit to the reader the intensity of the dreams and nightmares that inspired him into writing it; Nicolas de Crécy, on the other hand, uses a softer touch in his work The Glacial Period.

Isabel Kreitz [13] will represent Germany at the festival. She is famous all over her country, fame she earned and cultivated since the time she was awarded with the prestigious Sondermann Prize. Her most famous novel, Die Sache mit Sorge, focuses on the II World War historical period. In Ralf, instead, she describes the underground lives of subway surfers in Hamburg.

Igor [14] comes from Italy, but he can really be considered citizen of the world. His stories have no borders, his characters live in Japan, France, and America as well. This is Baobab's case, where the author tells the story of an orphan child in Tokyo that grows up with his grandmother. His latest album, anyway, is set in Italy. Five is the perfect number is about a mafia man that, after retiring from his criminal activities, decides to revenge his son's death.

Francesc Capdevilla Gisbert [15], finally, will present a surrealist album entitled Bardin the Superrrealist, translated and published in English in 2006. He clearly takes inspiration from Luis Bunuel and Salvador Dali'.

The artists will be involved in all kinds of activities during the festival. Among them, discussions, book signing and the presentation of an exhibition of 60 panels at the French Cultural Services. The exhibition will be on display from November 19 to December 12. The great public is invited to visit it for free on weekdays, from 1 to 5 pm.
